

Jan Du Plain Day

January 1, 2007

A PROCLAMATION BY THE MAYOR OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

WHEREAS Jan Du Plain, as a graduate of American University in Washington DC, has for the past 35 years been one of the most respected, trusted, and admired public relations professionals in the Washington DC area;

WHEREAS Ms. Du Plain has enriched such Washington cultural hallmark institutions as Ford's Theatre and WETA TV26/Radio with her public relations and marketing skills before starting her own firm and an International Speakers Bureau;

WHEREAS Jan's achievements in her various efforts stand out among her peers as marked by integrity, tireless effort, loyalty, discovering imaginative ways to represent and achieve the needs and goals of her clients;

WHEREAS Jan Du Plain moves with confidence and dramatic flair among powerbrokers, celebrities, and ordinary folks embodying the highest standards in public relations and marketing, and has a special gift for bringing people together to work on common goals that go beyond mere networking skills often resulting in the betterment of all concerned in the Washington DC community;

WHEREAS Jan Du Plain, while maintaining her public relations efforts, is now engaged in turning her Speakers Bureau to the specific ends of bringing individuals and institutions together through the first InterFaith Speakers Bureau in the nation's capital;

WHEREAS Ms. Du Plain's work is advancing these dynamic interfaith programs at a time when the need of peoples from different and sometime opposed cultures and faiths to achieve mutual understanding is essential;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, THE MAYOR OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, do hereby proclaim Monday, January 1, 2007 as "JAN DU PLAIN DAY" in Washington, D.C., and call upon all our citizens to salute this remarkable and talented woman.

Anthony A. Williams

Mayor, District of Columbia